Clallam Bay boil-water advisory ends

OLYMPIA — Clallam Bay residents no longer have to boil their tap water. A boil-water advisory issued Tuesday after a water transmission line broke has ended.

Clallam County Public Utility District 1 staff repaired the broken line and added extra chlorine to disinfect the system. Lab tests show the water is free of coliform bacteria and meets federal safe drinking water standards.

The utility issued the advisory as a safety precaution because contaminants could have been sucked into the broken water line. The advisory affected 130 homes and 30 commercial establishments in northwestern Clallam County.

Customers with questions about their water service may check the PUD website (www.clallampud.net), or call (360) 452-9771 or (800) 542-7859.
